A ROMAN FIDDLER

CREATES A DOMESTIC SENSATION.

Mr. Warner and His Fair Young Companion—The Mother Follows Her Child to New York—Love, Music, Photography and Scandal in the Cherokee Capital.

New York Herald, April 1.

A very unusual scene occurred yesterday in supreme court, chambers, before Judge Donohue. Colonel John R. Fellows came into court accompanied by two ladies. Both were fashionably dressed and matronly looking, and one was of decidedly prepossessing appearance. The latter cast her eyes anxiously about the room as if looking for some one. Within a few minutes a tall, fine looking gentleman came into the room, and, seeing the ladies, advanced to where they were seated. The lady spoken of saw him instantly.

"How do you do?" the gentleman asked, extending his hand.

"After what has occurred how can you expect me to speak to you," quietly answered the lady, her eyes flashing with indignation. "Where is Lulu?" she then asked, eagerly. "Why have you not brought her here, as ordered by the court? Has anything happened to the child?"

"Lulu is not well," the gentleman answered; "a mere temporary illness, nothing more. I will be able to bring her into court to-morrow."

The opening of the story underlying the above brief conversation was told by Colonel Fellows, who stated that he had come into court pursuant to habeas corpus proceedings instituted by Mrs. Warner to obtain the custody of her daughter, Lulu, a bright and promising girl nearly ten years old. The suit of habeas corpus had been directed to Charles J. Warner, the father of the young girl, with directions to produce her in court yesterday morning.

"The father is present," continued Colonel Fellows, "but he has failed to produce the daughter."

"She is too sick to be brought into court," interrupted Mr. Warner, rising to his feet.

"I regret to say," proceeded Colonel Fellows, "that I cannot believe what this man says. On the 14th of last January he deserted his wife and two children in Rome, Ga., and, taking his daughter Lulu with him, fled in company with a young lady of artistic repute, whose name I do not care to mention. He has since put Lulu on the stage, and I am seriously afraid, unless your honor makes some stringent order, he will fail to produce the child, and her mother will never see her again."

"When will you produce the child?" Judge Donohue asked Mr. Warner.

"To-morrow," he answered.

"But I want to be sure of her production," said Colonel Fellows, "and, as I have already intimated, I am not disposed to place any confidence in this man's promises."

"I will have the child given to her mother," said Mr. Warner.

"Is that satisfactory?" asked Judge Donohue.

"Perfectly," replied Colonel Fellows; "only I want your honor to direct an officer to go with him at once, take possession of the child and deliver her over to Mrs. Warner at her temporary residence with a lady friend in Brooklyn."

An order to this effect was at once given by Judge Donohue, with further instructions that the child be brought into court this morning, when he would give a full hearing to the case.

On leaving the court-room a reporter of the Herald had an interview with Mrs. Warner, who, on being inquired of as to whether Lulu was her only child, said:

"No, but she is my only daughter. I had another daughter, but she died when she was four years old. I have two sons, the eldest of whom is thirteen years of age. Mr. Warner left me in January last. We lived in Rome, Ga., and kept a store for the sale of photographs, artists' materials and fancy pottery. My husband had the care of the opera-house at Rome. The entertainments and theatrical exhibitions that came there we sold the tickets for, and this made him very much of a public man. He is a Freemason and is popular in our town and in many parts of the south. Among the musical circles of Rome he was very much in request; he is an excellent flute player, and was, therefore, able to assist very frequently in getting up concerts."

"Has music had anything to do in producing this discord between you, Mrs. Warner?"

"I don't know that it has," said Mrs. Warner, with a slight smile. "Perhaps you will understand this matter if I begin at the beginning. I was residing at Richmond, Va., with my mother when I first made the acquaintance of Mr. Warner. He told me that he was born in Gravesend, England; that he ran away from home, and landed at New Orleans, when he was fourteen years of age. He is now forty-three years old. I noticed that during our courtship he always pleaded that he had an engagement every evening about 7 o'clock, and that he went away and left me about that time. I tried to get from him what the engagement was, but he would never tell me, so I set my brother to watch him. He followed him and returned to tell me that Mr. Warner played in a band belonging to a circus which was then in Richmond. I did not mind that so much as I might probably have done if I had known it earlier in our acquaintance. He left the band, however, ultimately, and went into partnership with a photographer in the neighborhood of the White Sulphur Springs. About fourteen years ago we were married. We heard of a photographic gallery for sale in Rome, Ga. My mother and I had some little money, and my husband had some; so we put together and bought the gallery. We then went to Rome to live. My husband's faculty for making himself agreeable was quite useful, and in the Presbyterian church sociables, with which we were connected, and in all the social entertainments of the city, he was always an active worker. By this means we made a great many friends. I was very anxious that he should become a Mason. At that time there was not a lodge that was nearer than twenty miles, and when I urged him to qualify for membership he always said that the lodge was too far away. I asked him whether, if I should get him a horse, he would ride over some lodge night. He said he would. I got him the horse, and he rode over and came back a Mason. I was very proud of it. Our business prospered, we lived a very happy life, we had children born to us. We decided that we would open a store for the sale of photographs and artistic material, and we did so. Our residence was at some little distance from the store. I, however, managed not only to attend to my house and keep boarders, but also to be a clerk in my husband's store, and he used to tell his customers that the reason he could sell cheaper than others was that he did not have to pay a clerk.

"Among our friends was a dentist, a doctor of medicine, whose family consisted of a wife and daughter. The father was a good violinist, and the daughter grew to be a popular amateur vocalist, with a good soprano voice. When we first went to Rome she was quite a girl, and she is now only about twenty years of age. For some long time past the gossips of the place had associated my husband's name with this young lady's, and at last reports were brought to me that they were seen very frequently in each other's society. Well, that was not very strange, because her father, her mother and herself were friends of ours and were with my husband a good deal in musical practice. The young lady sang in the church choir. I do not now know or believe that there was anything wrong in this acquaintance of my husband with the doctor's daughter. But the townspeople knew more than I did, and I of course was the last to know anything that looked suspicious. Now and then the rumor would be so strong that I was obliged to speak to my husband about it. He always denied that there was anything more than the merest friendship between them, and told me not to mind what was said by the gossips. Well, I went on trying not to mind, but the talk was so loud that I asked my husband to suggest to her that she should not come to the store. He replied that it was a public store, and he could not do that. So matters went on, and I am now told that they have been seen passing letters to one another either as they met in the church or in the Sunday-school.

"One day in January last my husband told me that he wanted to go to Atlanta on business and would take Lulu with him. He arranged his affairs, leaving me in charge of his business. It was on a Wednesday, and he told me he would be back on Thursday or Friday. Sunday came and they did not return, and I made some excuse for him to inquiring friends. On Monday the doctor to whom I have referred came to me and asked me when my husband went away. I told him, and he said that his daughter left in the morning of the same day for Kingston, which is a little distance on the road to Atlanta, to visit some friends, and she had not returned. The doctor subsequently went to Atlanta, threatening vengeance against my husband if anything wrong had occurred. He traced them to New York. I afterward learned, and he and his daughter have obtained engagements with Skiff and Gaylord's minstrels, and are now, I understand, in Boston. My husband ultimately wrote me a letter, dated New York, but not giving any address, stating that he had left me because he thought it was better, and he was anxious that Lulu should be fitted for the stage. 'I don't want my daughter brought up for the stage. I want her to be brought up so that she shall know her brothers when she sees them.' I wrote a letter to my husband giving my views about it, and reminding him of all the happy years of our wedded life. A letter was sent me through a lady in the city, but I never read it, though others did. I afterward learned that the letter was very abusive of me. I then set about to try to find my child. We sent a man over to New York with a letter of introduction to Police Captain Gunner, but nothing came of it. Some lady friends of mine were coming to New York to buy millinery, about three weeks ago, and the thought occurred to me that I could come with them and probably find my daughter. The mayor of Rome gave me a letter to Mayor Cooper, who recommended me to Colonel Fellows. I stated my case to that gentleman fully, and retained him as my lawyer. He employed Detective L. A. Newcomb, who traced my husband from the postoffice on Friday last. Colonel Fellows was in Washington, and it was not until to-day that we could bring the case into court. When the judge gave the order for me to have the custody of Lulu I went with the detective and a lady friend to my husband's lodgings, at No. 100 Clinton place, and there saw my child, and here she is," pointing to an interesting girl, who is said to be a dancer, a harpist and a singer.

"Lulu," continued Mrs. Warner, "has been playing Eva in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' at the lyceum, in Williamsburg. My husband, I believe, played in the band or did something in connection with the performance. I had a conversation with my husband to-day, and he wanted to know if I wanted Lulu. I don't know that I replied, but he understands that I do. That will be settled in court to-morrow, I hope."

WADLEY'S WORK.

In Showing Mr. Newcomb Around the Country.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

SAVANNAH, April 3.—Mr. Newcomb, Mr. Wadley, General Alexander and Mr. DeFuniak spent the forenoon in inspecting the wharves, depot and machine shops of the Georgia Central railroad, and at two o'clock embarked on the steamer City of Savannah and, as was at first supposed, sailed for New York. The party, however, only went down the river eighteen or twenty miles and returned here on a tug boat, reaching the city after dark. The entire party have gone to-night to the residence of General Lawton, the attorney of the Georgia Central railroad.

Your correspondent learned from a gentleman who is in position to know that most important negotiations are pending between Newcomb, Wadley and Alexander, between whom it is evident the most cordial relations exist. It is said the party will leave here on Monday for Charleston.

Wadley's board meets on Tuesday next, when it is supposed, if any contracts or alliances have been made, they will be brought up for ratification.

The gentlemen who accompanied the party down the river say the movement was a blind to keep quiet the negotiations and enable Wadley, Alexander and Newcomb to discuss the situation. They occupied the captain's room, and were in close conference during the entire trip. It was remarked by one of the Georgia Central people that Wadley took Newcomb up on the captain's bridge of the steamer, and, no mountains being near at hand, he said unto him: "These possessions shall be thine if ——."

DR. H. P. GATCHELL.

Who the Supervisor of the Census Is.

Dr. H. P. Gatchell, who has been confirmed as supervisor of the census for the first Georgia district, will be a much sought man for the next two months. Applications for places as enumerators will be many, and the supervisor will have a large list from which to select nearly one hundred assistants for his work.

Dr. Gatchell was born in Maine, but removed to Mississippi about fifty years ago. He lived in that state and in Alabama three or four years, and then went to Ohio where he held professorships in two leading medical colleges with honor. He was then called to a college in Wisconsin. Afterwards he went to Chicago where he succeeded finely in his profession. On account of failing health he moved south in 1877, bringing ten invalids with him. He has since been instrumental in bringing large numbers of invalids to the south for their health.

Dr. Gatchell has resided in Atlanta and at different points on the Air-Line railroad. He belongs to a strictly medical family. His wife is a skillful physician. He has four sons now actively in the profession, two of them enjoying an extensive practice in Atlanta. A younger son will soon graduate and enter the medical practice.

Dr. Gatchell is a republican in politics, but is very liberal in his views. He has many qualifications which suit him for the place he has been chosen to fill.

All persons intending to apply for the position of enumerator should send in their applications to the supervisor of the census, Dr. H. P. Gatchell, Atlanta, at once, as the time is limited before the names should be sent to Washington for the approval of the superintendent of the census, General Walker. In the absence of other instructions from Washington persons are desired to make out their applications in their own hand-writing; and these should be accompanied by testimonials as regards education, and assurances that the duties would be thoroughly and honestly performed.

The following counties constitute the first census district:

Dade, Walker, Catoosa, Whitfield, Chattooga, Murray, Gordon, Floyd, Bartow, Polk, Haralson, Paulding, Cobb, Cherokee, Pickens, Gilmer, Fannin, Union, Towns, Rabun, Lumpkin, White, Habersham, Hall, Dawson, Forsyth, Milton, Gwinnett, DeKalb, Fulton.

Signs of a Backdown.

TROY, N. Y., April 3.—There are indications of a backdown by the Cohoes strikers, and it is said by many if to-day and to-morrow should prove stormy two-thirds of the operatives, now out, would return to work without further parley. Large numbers of the spinners express disapprobation at the stubbornness of the strikers in not accepting as a basis of settlement the reinstatement of the men claimed to have been black-listed by Boss Murphy. Evidently a spirit of dissatisfaction exists among the employes which is becoming more marked as time passes.

IN THE CAPITAL.

PUTTING MORRISON IN THE FIELD.

Colonel E. Speer, of the Ninth, Courting Radical Puffs on Every Occasion—South Carolina's Quota of Arms—Waste of Gas in the House of Representatives.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The house elections committee, after considerable preliminary sparring and fighting for position, settled down to work on the Donnelly-Washburn case on Thursday and effectually decided it, so far as the committee is concerned. It will now be transferred to the arena of the house, and there the grand struggle will take place.

Immediately after the assembling of the committee a motion was made to take up the case, but it was opposed by the republican members. The discussion preceding the vote was active and lively, but not at any time of an acrimonious character. At last the question was put to vote. On the proposition that Washburn should be declared not entitled to the seat now occupied by him, the vote was: Yeas—Weaver, Phister, Sawyer, Armfield, Colerick and Manning—6; nays—Overton, Field, Calking, Keefer and Hurd—5. On this point, Chairman Springer and Mr. Beltzhoover, who would have voted in the affirmative, were paired with Messrs. Clark and Camp, who would have voted in the negative.

The next question was, "Is Ignatius Donnelly entitled to the seat." This was decided also in the negative by the following vote: Yeas—Manning, Armfield, Colerick and Sawyer—4; nays—Weaver, Overton, Speer, Calkins, Freeland, Keifer, Phister and Spring—8. Mr. Beltzhoover, who would have voted in the affirmative, was paired with Mr. Camp who would have voted in the negative. Mr. Clark cast his vote on this proposition by letter and against Mr. Donnelly.

There will be four reports to the house from the committee, one favoring the vacation of Washburn's seat, one opposing it, one declaring Donnelly not entitled to it, and vice versa.

The verdict of the committee, although not unexpected, has caused considerable feeling, and some impetuous democrats talk mildly of flinging themselves into the breach and taking snap action on every election case. Mr. Speer expressed himself yesterday as intending to vote to seat Bigbee, the republican contestant in the Florida case.

Mr. Springer's sudden conversion to the idea of leaving the Washburn seat vacant was the theme of much angry comment last evening. It is hard to understand it. The gentleman himself claims to have acted throughout from conscientious motives, and has endeavored to entirely divest himself of anything like partisan bias or improper motives.

The democrats of the ninth district who helped to send Emory Speer to congress had better send somebody to look after him, or he will vote the democratic party out of power in the house. He has voted in favor of the radical Washburn, and of allowing him to keep his seat. Donnelly, the contestant, makes a clear case against Washburn for brazen bribery, and the democrats on the elections committee will agree to report in favor of Washburn. The report shows that Donnelly is rightfully elected by 230 majority. This case is of far more interest to the democratic party than to the individuals concerned. If Donnelly is given his rightful seat, the safety of the party is secured in the event the election of president is thrown in the house. If Washburn is allowed to retain his stolen seat, and the election is thrown in the house, the result will be doubtful.

This is too important a question for Speer to be airing his independentisms. His position gains him the applause of the republicans. A day or two since the National Republican, a radical sheet, copied a puff of Speer from a Georgia paper, and took the occasion to encourage Speer in his course. If a republican was in Speer's seat the people of Georgia would know what to expect, but Speer claims to be a democrat. Even Weaver, the political hermaphrodite, has foregone his republican proclivities, and it is said will now vote to seat Donnelly.

The Donnelly-Washburne case bids fair to lead to new and unexpected complications. Springer, chairman of the house committee on elections, having received a letter from Representative Manning stating that he proposed to prefer charges against him. Springer who offered a motion which actuated his course and determined his vote in the case, will on Monday call the attention of the house to the matter and ask for a thorough investigation. In a conversation to-day, while declining to express any opinion as to the true source of the animus of the attack upon the integrity of his conduct, Springer stated that at the proper time he would show to his colleagues and the country that his vote upon the Donnelly-Washburne case was strictly in accordance with his convictions, and that not a shadow of foundation exists for any charge or insinuation of corrupt motives, or improper influences.

The friends of Morrison, of Illinois, have organized a club here with a view of presenting his claims to the democratic party as their candidate for president. The western democrats are very warm in their support of him, and everybody speaks well of him. His friends claim that he can carry Illinois and Ohio. He was a democrat during the war, but fought in the union army. His record is a good one. All of these new candidates are coming to the front on the growing feeling that Tilden cannot be nominated, because he cannot carry New York. If Morrison can carry the state, as his friends claim that he can, the uncertain New York democracy can barter their state to the opposition if they like, for they cannot control or affect the result.

Senator Thurman has about recovered from his recent attack of vertigo, and was in the senate yesterday.

The best posted members of congress think congress will not be able to adjourn until the 1st of July, and some say not until August.

The only chance for the bill admitting paper free of duty to fail, will be through an attempt to load it with amendments. The newspaper fraternity have counted votes and the result is a majority are in its favor.

Major Mims, of Atlanta, is at the Ebbitt house, T. Stobo Farrow, of South Carolina; J. H. Harreman, of Savannah, and D. B. Woodruff, of Macon, are registered at the National hotel.

Some of the southern members are getting impatient at the slow progress which the house is making with the appropriation bills, and it is understood that there is a general disposition to push these bills as rapidly as possible, and by not participating in the general debate to expedite their passage. It is said that thirty-eight of the prominent southern members have agreed to this. The reason given for the haste is that it is important that they should be at home looking after their renomination, and if the session reaches into midsummer they will have difficulty in controlling their districts. The chairman of the appropriations committee, Mr. Atkins, of Tennessee, is very anxious to get through with the regular bills, and so are other members of the committee. Speaker Randall is with those favoring adjournment at an early day, and will do all in his power to facilitate the work of the appropriations committee. The purpose now is to fix the day of adjournment by the middle of June.

The sub-committee of the committee on commerce, which has been preparing the river and harbor appropriation bill, expect to complete their work to-night and report the bill to the full committee to-morrow. Some of the largest works have been left unprovided for, as the committee has been unable to agree upon any sum, and have left such cases to be acted upon by the full committee. The entire appropriation made by the bill amount to between six and seven millions.

Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, introduced in the senate a bill providing that the account for arms between the state of South Carolina and the government of the United States be balanced "as that the amounts paid on said account by said state for the ten years last past be taken in full satisfaction of the same." In 1869, during the carpet-bag regime in South Carolina, the then Governor (Scott) overdrew, with the concurrence of the military authorities in Washington, the quota of arms due to the state under the act of 1808 to the extent of nearly $120,000. Since that time no annual distribution of arms has been made to South Carolina, as provided for by the act of 1808, but the cost has been credited for the amount overdrawn. The balance still due is over $80,000, and if it is permitted to stand, it will be twenty years more before South Carolina will get any quota of arms from the general government. The arms obtained by the carpet-baggers included 10,000 Springfield muskets, which were distributed around promiscuously among the colored population, with infantry accoutrements to match, and were never recovered. The senate military committee, which has considered all the circumstances, reports the bill of Mr. Butler favorably.

General Gibson, of Louisiana, has received a petition forwarded him by the bar and the leading merchants of New Orleans, without regard to party, asking some increase of salary for the United States district judge of that district. The petition sets forth that an extraordinary amount of business of all kinds within the federal jurisdiction is constantly crowded upon Judge Billings, making his labors more severe than is usual with district judges.

In Congress.

THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The house met this morning, Mr. Carlisle, of Kentucky, in the chair, for debate only, and immediately went into a committee of the whole on the state of the union.

Mr. Covert, of New York, addressed the committee on the subject of a revision of the tariff; he had voted the other day to refer the Townshend bill to the committee on ways and means, not because he was not in favor of a revision of the tariff, but because he had thought that that was the committee which, under the rules, had jurisdiction over the subject. He argued especially in favor of a reduction of the duty on steel rails and in favor of placing chrome ore on the free list, but though he desired a revision of the tariff, he desired it, made in a legitimate, orderly way, and would therefore oppose any project looking to the appointment of a commission on the subject of a tariff revision.

Mr. Houk, of Tennessee, replied to the speech made some time ago by Mr. House, of Tennessee, in which that gentleman had opened the Tilden campaign, and had so forcibly reiterated the ancient cry of "fraud." He denied that the gentleman had expressed the sentiment of the people of Tennessee. If he had expressed that of his party, his speech would stand as a lasting monument to the vitiated taste and malignant hate of that party. The country was told that there had been no loyalty in the south during the war, and it had been told by the copperheads of the north, the most venomous serpents in the world. He asserted that there had been many loyal men in the south, and that that section had furnished the federal army with nearly half a million of men. It seemed this service was to be forgotten, and the Tilden campaign prosecuted on the policy that friendship for the union was to be regarded as a badge of political infamy and social dishonor. His colleague, Mr. House, had attacked the president. He would not attempt to defend the president, for that officer needed no defense. For his colleague to assert that President Hayes had been inaugurated by fraud was equivalent to making the admission that the democratic party had been brave enough in 1861 to force war without cause, but too cowardly to do so in 1877, when it said that the president had been counted in by uncondonable fraud. How had the mighty fallen! What had come over the spirit of the chivalrous democrats of the south. He then turned his attention to the political assessment bill, ridiculing the present civil service system and referring in the course of his remarks, to George William Curtis as the prince of political humbugs and to Secretary Schurz as the king of civil service reform.

Mr. Lowe, of Alabama, spoke in opposition to the funding bill. He had always had democratic sympathies, but he declared here and now that of the two old factions, high tariff and hard-money democrats, were not to be preferred to hard-money and high tariff republicans.

The committee arose and the house at 4 o'clock adjourned.

Hymeneal.

On Thursday night last, at the residence of Mr. Elisha Morris, Mr. Burnett McCravy and Miss Ola Doles were married by Rev. A. G. Thomas. A large concourse of friends were present and congratulated the happy couple. An elegant supper was served and at a late hour the party separated, with many good wishes for Mr. and Mrs. McCravy.

A sad accident occurred to Judge Clark Howell and wife on their return from the wedding. The buggy in which they were seated rolled down an embankment over ten feet. Judge and Mrs. Howell are both confined to bed from their injuries, which are quite severe. Their many friends wish them a speedy recovery.

RELIGIOUS ITEMS.

A LARGE and elegant church is to be erected at Rising Fawn, in Dade county.

REV. E. R. CARSWELL, of Louisville, Jefferson county, is suffering from congestion of the lungs.

REV. MARTIN PORTER, of Paulding county, was recently found dead in the water under his mill. It is supposed that he was accidentally drowned.

REV. C. J. WINGATE, formerly of St. Luke's in this city, and more recently of Rome, will take charge of the parish at Darien.

A RELIGIOUS revival of great power has been enjoyed by the congregation visiting Trinity Methodist church in Savannah.

THE new Methodist church at Social Circle, which is a neat and handsome one, is very nearly completed.

HEAVY rains caused the foundation of the new Baptist church at Bowman, Madison county, Georgia, to give way, and the building now is a complete wreck.

THE Baptist state convention of Georgia will meet in Savannah, on the 22 instant. It represents [illegible] churches, and a membership of 219,723 in the state.

ON last Sunday Rev. L. W. Stephens preached in Hartwell. He said the Baptists had had a church in Hartwell for twenty years, and had never had a revival, and as far as known had never given away anything to foreign missions.

THE FITFUL FIRST

AND THE PEOPLE WHOM IT FITS.

Bill Arp Experiences Some Difficulty in Placing Himself Inside his Usual Garments—The Girls at the Window—"The Fool's Errand" Duly Considered

Written for the Constitution.

If a man could compromise by being fooled just one day in the year, it would be a good trade. The trouble with me is, I am a fool about half the time. Everybody else is, too, but they either don't know it or won't admit it. Mr Milton says the pursuit of riches is the toil of fools, and Mr. Milton is very high authority. That convicts about half of us I know. Dr. Franklin says fools learn only in the hard school of experience. That gets the other half. I was a fool the other night for bragging to my children that nobody could ever April fool me. So the next morning, which was the 1st day of April, it was my day to put on a clean garment and it took me five minutes tugging and pushing to get my arms through the sleeves before I found out it wasent the starch that had stuck the cloth together, but somebody had sowed it up with malice aforethought. My boots had about half a pound of shingle nails in em. The first battercakes they handed me at breakfast were all right and uncommon good, but the hot ones that came next from the kitchen I soon discovered were a little tough and disinclined to dissolve in the usual way. I never tried to eat any flannel cakes before and am not prepared to recommend em very highly to anybody. I had a good segar on the clock, and having lit it went out in the piazzer, and taking a cheer I put my boots upon the banister to enjoy it. Some individual unknown had took the fuse out of some fire cracker and stuck it way down in the segar, and the first thing I knowed it commenced fizzen and fusin and shootin out fire, and I throwed it a rod for fear of being blowed up, and when I looked round the whole family was just a dyin at the windows a looking at me. Of course I surrendered and was about leaving the premises to keep out of further trouble, but they solemnly promised that the show had closed and I stayed. All day long the little chaps were knocking at the front door, and every little while one of em would scream and yell like something dreadful was the matter with him. It did em so much good that we all pretended to be fooled everytime. That night each one had a secret for Mrs. Arp which was to sow up the others breeches or frock sleeves after they had gone to bed and so the intelligent woman that she is just sowed them all up.

These little fooleries pass away with a day, but there are some big ones that dont. You wrote so much about that new book, "The Fools Errand," not long ago, that I sorter wanted to read it, especially when I saw that the radical party had ordered a million copies for campaign documents. Well, I've read it, and I feel better. I feel prouder of our southern land and her people. It's a right good little story—which is to say the story part is an awful big lie, but not as big as Uncle Tom's cabin; and once in a while a feller is obliged to get mad, but then the author is a fine reasoner and a philosopher, and says about as much for us as agin us. I don't exactly perceive what they want with it as a campaign document. He says the north has been on a fool's errand for fifteen years in bedevilling our people and trying to reconstruct us. He says they put military officers over us and put disabilities on our best men—they gave our slaves the power over us. Men born at the north came down here and were given office by the votes of negroes and renegades. They squandered the state's revenue and contracted millions of debts. Then he says "one cannot but regard with pride and sympathy the indomitable men who being conquered in war yet resisted every effort of the conqueror to change their laws or their customs—resisted not only with stubbornness but with success. How boldly they charged the nation which had overpowered them, with perfidy, malice and a spirit of unworthy and contemptible revenge. How they laughed to scorn the reconstruction acts of which the wise men at Washington boasted. In all this we recognize the elements which go to make up a grand and kingly people."

I like that sort of talk pretty well. But he goes on to say that the civilization of the south is the most intense, vigorous and aggressive. Upon all questions touching the nation and its future, they are practically a unit. They are thoroughly united, and are instinctive natural rulers. They do not waste their energies upon frivolous and immaterial issues. They are monarchical and kingly in their characteristics—each one thinks more of the south than of himself and anything which adds to her prestige or glory is dearer to him than any personal advantage. The north thinks the south is angry because of the loss of their slave property, but the truth is the north is a thousand times more exasperated by the elevation of the negro to equal political power. The north is disunited. A part will adhere to the south, and just as before the war the south will again dominate and control the nation."

That's all right, ain't it. That don't sound like a radical wrote it. I reckon that last is to be the campaign document They don't want us to dominate. They see what a big mistake they made in giving the negro a vote. It gives us more representation in congress. They would take it away from him now if they could; and, as they can't, they are trying to exodust him to the northwest. But they can't do that, and now they are begging him to go to Africa, and he won't. They are in a dickens of a fix. They have sowed the wind, and are reaping the whirlwind. We are getting all right. If our folks will act up to what that Fool's Errand feller says and be united and every man think more of the south and her glory than of himself, I know she will come out ahead. But somehow or other it don't seem to me that a man who bolts his party and side wipes around for an office on the independent line is very much united or very particular about his country's glory. It looks to me like he is after his own glory first, and after he gets his share if theres any glory left I reckon maybe he would give it to his country—though I am liable to be mistaken in my peculiar view of such things.

On the whole I am obliged to think that campaign document a very good book for our side, and I think our folks ought to tole fair and pay for half of em and let the radicals distribute em. If any southerner was to write a book and say the whole south had been a pack of fools fifteen years, and was to prove it I think it would make me mad, and not be a very good campaign document in every family. I get mad now whenever a man abuses secession. And thats exactly what the Fool's Errand does to the north. He makes em all out a set of fools and all their reconstruction legislation stupendous folly.

P. S.—When the Georgia Western is built I want Grady to be the treasurer with ten thousand dollars salary and perquisites. I believe now that he and Mr. Newcomb will build it. If I was worth two or three millions and a man was to follow me about over ten states and was an elegant gentleman like Grady, I'd surrender and hold out the golden scepter. I heard of a gal once who refused a fellow fifty-six times and finally had to marry him to get rid of him.

DR. TALMAGE.

"The Bright Side of Things" Last Night.

The largest audience which has ever greeted a lecturer in this city, turned out to hear the celebrated Brooklyn divine last night. Quite a number were compelled to seek seats in the gallery, the lower part of the opera-house being entirely filled. The audience, we think, was extraordinary for intelligence, solidity and culture, and it is safe to say that many of the faces were those of people who have never been seen at theatrical performances in this city. When we consider the fact that Atlanta has no inferior as a mere lecture-town in this, or any other state, it was highly gratifying to our city pride, and it must have been peculiarly pleasant to the distinguished speaker to see such a large attendance.

The fame of the lecturer is great, and of course expectation ran mountain-high, but if we are to judge from the hearty and frequent bursts of applause and the continuous laughter a better entertained crowd has never gathered in that opera house.

A man who would try to make a diagnosis of that lecture would be fool enough to try to analy a woman's mind—it just can't be done. The reason is simple. The lecture is the natural outgrowth of the mental and physical idiosyncracies of this wonderful talker and is not constructed after the methods in common use among common speakers. Every part of it bore the impress of originality and herein, it would seem, is to be found its greatest charm. The stamp of the Talmagian individuality was all over it. He has a humor of his own, a pathos of his own, a fancy of his own, an eloquence of his own, a grandeur of his own, and it is difficult to tell of which quality he has the best and fullest supply. One thing is certain, Everybody in the audience wants to hear everything he says, whether it be sober or comical, because he speaks not to a class, but to all, the simple and the cultured alike. And just here lies his great power as a lecturer.

He has all kinds of delivery and of course everybody sees something in it to like. He has all kinds of a voice and everybody hears some tones to his fancy. He said last night that he believed it to be the duty of men to look on the bright side of things. This was the gist of his talk. But he said it with a thousand different tones, and with a thousand different thoughts with such wit, humor, pathos, eloquence and grand, that we doubt if a man, woman, or child, left that house last night without a firm resolve to take things more cheerfully in the lives they are living.

General Evans, who gracefully introduced the lecturer, announced after the lecture that Dr. Talmage will preach at the First Methodist church to-night. We noticed Governor Colquitt, Drs. Martin, of the First Presbyterian, and Gwin of the First Baptist, on the stage.

ALL AROUND US.

Americus, Elberton, Dahlonega, Opelika, Etc.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Sheriff Kendall arrested John Coxwell, Jim Blackburn, Newt Nichols and Earnest Walker on yesterday and committed them to jail. They are supposed to be implicated in the Turner murder. Solicitor Reese has been telegraphed for and the commitment trial will come off this afternoon at 3 o'clock.

FORSYTH, April 3—A joint stock company will build a brick hotel soon on the old site of the Greer house.——Several families will locate here within a short time on account of the healthfulness of the climate and excellent school facilities. Among the number, Mr. E. E. Brown, the former proprietor of the Brown house, Macon.

OPELIKA, April 2.—Representatives of the E. A. & C. R. R. bondholders passed over that road to-day. They are inspecting it with a view to its purchase on the 5th inst. ——An ice-house has been erected here by Captain F. M. Dunbar.——A negro woman was found dead here yesterday morning in her bed. An inquest was held, and afterwards the physicians dissected her body.

DAHLONEGA, April 1.—Captain Deadman has commenced operations at his brick-yard. The first work to be done is to make one hundred thousand brick to complete the North Georgia agricultural college building. It is said money has been secured to carry on the work and that the building will be ready for occupation by the school at the beginning of the fall session in September. A number of brick houses are expected to be built in Dahlonega during the year.

ELBERTON, April 2.—Mr. Thomas H. Brewer and Miss Emma Oglesby were married yesterday afternoon. The reception last night at the residence of Mr. James H. Brewer was a brilliant affair.——There is a probability of a large hotel being built here soon, to be run by Mr. J. O. Saunders. ——The merchants of Elberton have bought large stocks of goods this season—some of them purchasing their entire stock in Atlanta.

STARKEVILLE, MISS., April 3.—The negro Wesley Hall, who murdered Dr. S. A. Wilkins, of Talbot county, Ga., last fall, was arrested here to-day. Our sheriff received, a few days since, his description, etc., and the arrest was made with some difficulty. An officer is on the way with requisition papers. He had assumed an alias, but by fortuitous circumstances his real name, Wesley Hall, was ascertained, and he was promptly arrested and lodged in jail, and the Georgia authorities notified.

MARIETTA, April 3.—There was quite an accident at the paper mill yesterday evening. The bridge gave way and let Mr. S A Anderson's team, driver and all into the creek. They had 25 feet to fall, and the driver, Mr. Adams, is badly hurt, but the doctor says not seriously. The wagon was loaded with wood, and a stick of wood jobbed a hole into his leg. The wagon and load fell on the mules, and held them down until the men could come from the mill and release them.

GRIFFIN, April 3.—It does not often occur that a place usually possessed with so much gayety and life and push and everything else that goes to make up a flourishing little city as Griffin his, should reach a time in her history when even the ghost of something new and startling is a novelty; yet such is the lamentable state of affairs. We have enjoyed for a long time almost perfect immunity from crime, and all else that disturbs our social elements. ——Last night there was held in the Methodist church, a foreign mission meeting, at which a number of fine speeches were delivered. Among the number I mention Dr. M. B. Drewry, Prof. Gorham, Mr. R. H. Johnston, Robert T. Daniel and Dr. T. R. Kendall. The exercises were very interesting and awakened much feeling in the cause of mission.

AMERICUS, April 2.—Last night as Mr. Eugene Byrd, one of our best young men, was returning to the city from the little suburb of Leeton, where he had been to take tea with his parents, he was suddenly assailed by some would-be assassin, who was concealed behind a tree upon the loneliest part of the road. The miscreant dealt him a severe blow with some kind of a knife which struck Mr. Byrd in the right arm, cutting through his clothing and slightly wounding the arm. Mr. Byrd sprang out of the way of his assailant and drew his pistol and fired two shots at the scamp as he fled through the thick woods which skirted the road at that point. The darkness was so dense that Byrd could not tell whether he was attacked by a white man or a negro. Fortunately for him, however, he was prepared for such an emergency, and his prompt defensive measures probably saved his life. This outrageous assault was perpetrated just outside the city limits, upon a street that is much traveled by our people who live out in Leeton, and consequently has occasioned a good deal of comment and aroused the righteous indignation of our citizens.

BEAC'S BALK

IN "RECURRING" TO THE PEOPLE.

A Continued Round of Liberal Successes Throughout the Empire—A Cabinet Minister Defeated—The Home Rulers also Successful—Views of the Press.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The associated press has returns by cable of the elections in 218 constituencies in Great Britain showing that the liberals have elected 206 members, the conservatives 122 and the home rulers 12. The liberals have gained 58 seats and lost 17, while the home rulers so far show a gain of three seats.

The London Times in a leader on the elections, says the first question which arises is, what is to be the composition of the new cabinet? Lord Hartington, in a recent speech, seemed to imply that in some degree it was an open question who should lead the liberals. It will be for Lord Beaconsfield to advise the queen who is to be the official chief. The parliamentary leader of the liberals is Lord Granville, who has every claim on grounds of past services, rank and ability to become premier. Lord Hartington will hold an important position in the cabinet, and will lead his party in the house of commons.

Edward Birkbick and Sir Edmund H. K. Lacern, conservatives, for Norfolk, North; Lord Brooke and Sir John W. Miles, conservatives, for Somersetshire; Sir Alexander H. Gordon, liberal, for Aberdeenshire, East, were re-elected without opposition. The defeat at York city, of Right Hon. James Lowther, conservative, chief-secretary for Ireland, is received with wild delight by the home rulers and nationalists in Ireland. Sir John Lubbock, liberal, who was defeated at Maidestone, will probably stand for Radnor in the event that the marquis of Hartington, liberal leader, is successful in Northeast Lancashire, the later having been elected for Radnor and not for Lancashire, as previously announced.

The poll for the London university opened on the 31st ultimo and will remain open until Monday the 5th inst. The voting is viva voce, and not by ballot. Up to noon to-day the Right Hon. Robert Lowe, liberal, chancellor of the exchequer in Gladstone's government, received 957 votes and A Charles, conservative, 494.

The following candidates for parliament have been elected: Sir Thomas Dyke Achland (liberal), and Sir Stafford H. Northcote, chancellor of the exchequer (conservative), for Devonshire north, re-elected without opposition; Sir Walter H. Burrell (conservative) for Shoreham, re-elected; William R. Loder (conservative) for Shoreham; Mr. William A. Redmond (home-ruler) for Wexford borough, re-elected.

The Times in its leading article says that after Mr. Gladstone's defeat in 1874, he not only resigned the leadership of the liberals, but declared his intention of withdrawing as far as possible from active political life, and the logical consequences of this resolution would be that he would not take office in the coming administration. This resolution has already been in spirit very conspicuously infringed, and it cannot be doubted that very strong pressure will be brought to bear upon him in order to induce him to abandon it. Nobody can doubt that he is the most potent force on the liberal side. But for him there is no sign that the policy of the government would have been so vehemently changed. It is Gladstone who has led and inspired the assault which has now been so conspicuously successful, and he must be regarded as representing the views of that class of voters to whom the liberal majorities are due. The same article points to a remark of Gladstone in a speech at Westcalder yesterday to the effect that he neither directly nor indirectly insinuated to any one that he had come there as chief of the party, or to return to office at his time of life was his desire. The Times says this is a very different thing from refusing to accept the responsibility naturally attaching to the course he has recently pursued, and it is therefore scarcely conceivable that Gladstone, while remaining in public life, will not form a member of the new cabinet.

Special dispatch to The Constitution.

The Saturday Review, independent, says the constituencies could not have given a much more decided answer to Lord Beaconsfield's appeal, but why they have given it nobody can exactly say. Very probably many electors were tired of the government merely because it had been six years in office, but there are some things elections have placed beyond contest; they show that the republicans have not exercised the influence it was expected they would, that the liberals were not divided by crotchets, that their party organization is much improved, and that the moderates have as a rule neither abstained nor gone over, but have voted with their party.

The Spectator (liberal) says that nothing surprises the people more in the elections than the evidence of how easy it is to live in England and not know anything about the real opinion of England. Wherever you went you were told whatever Scotchmen or Irishmen might think, England would support Lord Beaconsfield's policy with enthusiasm. In a second article on the consequences of the liberal victory the Spectator says: It is a severe blow to the tory democrats. The next man who professes faith in a monarch and the multitude must appeal to the latter on socialist grounds or undertake the enterprises requiring sacrifices that will speedily restore the people to themselves. No other man will ever wave the banner of prestige as Lord Beaconsfield has done without striking a stroke for it. In the second place, we are rid of personal government. It is, however, in its effect abroad that the liberal victory will be the most far-reaching. We don't believe there will be joy at St. Petersburg at all. Russia dreads and distrusts certain views of the liberal chiefs, especially Gladstone's, far more than she dreads the ministry, which can be coerced into secret compacts. But millions of Greeks, Armenians and Bulgarians will rejoice at the prospect of the new career made possible to them, and their rejoicing will be feeble compared with the exaltation of our own millions in India no longer taxed to death in order that a premier may pass as the arbiter of the destinies of Central Asia. England can hear with equanimity that Prince Bismarck is sorrowful and Baron Haymerle worried, if throughout the world all freemen feel as if, with the tory democratic government of England, a miasmatic cloud had been rolled away.

Sam Hoyle's Case.

Yesterday morning a dispatch was received by Mrs. W. A. Starnes from her husband, dated at Los Angelos, stating that the case against Hoyle would be taken up Monday, by which time the second requisition and other papers will have reached Los Angelos, their destination. The dispatch was short and contained no particulars, consequently we are still in doubt as to the exact situation in Los Angelos.

During the past two days Deputy Sheriff L. P. Thomas has been engaged in selling out the entire stock of E. Cahn, one of the bondsmen of Mr. Hoyle. Mr. Thomas sold the goods by auction process, realizing about nine hundred dollars. Some of the articles were sold for a song, while others brought all that they were worth. Sheriff Thomas made a fine reputation as an auctioneer.

Aladdin.

The matinee performance of this charming little extravaganza at the matinee yesterday was perhaps finer than that of the night before. The children were at their best, and moved through the light, loveliness and splendor of the varied scenes with an ease and sprightliness that was enchanting. The extravaganza has two merits which specially fit it for presentation by amateurs. It is not too long, being only two hours in length; and it is rich in variety—variety in costume, variety in the pantomime, variety in the dancing.

The scenes, too, followed in rapid and glittering succession, culminating in a tableau of dazzling beauty.

Not knowing the name of the performers—they were not on the programme—we can not well praise the numerous little people personally.

HANDSOME HARNESS.

What an Atlanta House is Doing.

Yesterday in passing the store of C. W. Motes & Co., No. 96 Whitehall street the attention of the reporter was attracted by the glitter on a splendid set of harness. On examination he found it to be a very fine specimen of the saddler's science. It was of the best procurable material and had been finished as fine as skilled workmen could finish it. Its buckles, ornaments and chains were heavy gold plate, and gave the harness a very rich appearance. It has just been finished for W. O. Jones, the popular young proprietor of Jones's livery stable, and will grace one of his beautiful horses. It is similar to the set of harness which won the prize at the fair for this firm. They are making all styles of harness, in the best manner, and of selected fine material. Their prices range from $12 to $100. In fine harness they are meeting the demands of the best city trade, and are doing some of the best work we have ever seen. All their work is hand-made and they use only the best material. In saddles, they offer as great a variety as in harness, and make the most approved styles for gentlemen and ladies. Their stock of harness, saddles, whips, and other goods wanted for a horse, is large and excellent. Low prices and superior goods have made the house known all over the state. They offer the trade superior inducements.

Musical Notes.

The latest and prettiest music may be heard every day at O. L. Braumuller & Co's, where Mr. Harry Piano entertains all who come, with his delightful performances. As a pianist he has few equals, and has gained a great popularity in Atlanta. Persons who wish to buy music can ascertain all its merits by hearing him play it over. We scarcely ever pass this popular music-house without hearing what seems to be a concert inside. This attraction, with the well-known fact that Braumuller & Co. always keep the newest and prettiest music, is attracting great attention to their stock. Their supply of sheet music is very large and select, and they keep a splendid assortment of all kinds of musical instruments.

A New Catholic Parish.

The rapid increase of the Catholic population of Atlanta has rendered necessary a division of the city into two parishes. The new parish will embrace the western portion of the city, and the church building will be erected on the Mills property, corner Marietta and Alexander streets, which has been purchased for that purpose.

The first services will be held at the new location at half-past ten this morning, by Rev. Father McMurphy. pastor of the new parish of SS. Peter and Paul.

Safe.

In order to allay any undue anxiety to the many friends of Mr. Alexander Kreisle, of this city, who left New York March 11th on board the steamer Silesia for Germany, we will state that we were shown a cable telegram dated "London, March 29th. Steamer Silesia from New York, March 11th for Hamburg, was fallen in with on the 26th by steamer Vaterland, from Antwerp for Philadelphia, with main shaft broken, and towed into Queenstown to-day by the latter vessel."

PERSONAL MENTION.

—Mr. P. J. Sewell and lady of Grantville, are visiting the city.

—It is stated that Judge Logan E. Bleckley is residing in a log cabin that he has had built upon a mountain in front of the town of Clayton, Rabun county, and facing the old Blue Ridge. He is living alone, save that he has for a companion a young boy who is said to be very intelligent. It is also reported that Judge Bleckley does his own cooking, and the neighbors say he is engaged in writing a book.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

The Sunday-school institute at the Church of Christ on Friday night last was well attended and was greatly enjoyed by all who attended. Mr. Courtney, as a teacher and black-board delineator, has no equal in the south. The next meeting will be held at the First M. E. church.

"CHILDREN'S DAY."

At the last quarterly meeting of Fulton county Sunday-school association, held at the First M. E. church on Wednesday last, a programme was agreed upon for the celebration of "children's day," May 1st. It is proposed to have a grand march through the streets of the city, with bands of music, banners, etc., and then take cars for Oglethorpe park for a grand gala day and picnic, at which everything is to be arranged for the special enjoyment of the children and young people. All the schools in both city and country are to participate.

The Constitution.

ATLANTA, GA., APRIL 4, 1880.

THE democrats of Nebraska refused to instruct their delegates on the subject of the two-thirds rule, and the indications are that most of the other states will do likewise, thus leaving the national body free to act as to it seems wisest.

EVEN Massachusetts is preparing to substitute biennial for annual elections. Like all of the rest of the states she is sick of the turmoil and waste of politics. The house has passed the resolve in favor of biennial elections, and it is believed the senate and the next legislature will also pass it. If it becomes a law, the first election for a biennial term will be in November, 1882.

THE Jesuits and other unrecognized religious bodies in France propose to leave the country in obedience to the order of the government, but before going they propose to perfect an organization that will enable them to secure, if possible, their return to France. In short, they propose to plot for the downfall of the republic. They had better go prepared to stay abroad a considerable space of time.

THE opening of the Metropolitan museum of art in New York, last week, was an event that appropriately called from the capital the president and a part of his cabinet. There were collected in the spacious building some of the best citizens of the country. It was well. The chief city of the country has laid the foundation of a grand collection, and we hope her people will go on until the building is completed and well filled with all that is highest and best in art.

The Parliamentary Election.

The result of the English elections is now near enough ascertained to leave only three important questions in doubt. It is not known whether the liberals proper will have a clear majority, or whether the home rulers, who are more liberal than the liberals, will hold the balance of power. Beaconsfield may attempt, in case the home rulers hold the balance of power, to secure their support by offering them audacious concessions, not to wholly support the conservatives, but to form themselves into an independent party. This is very probable, as the home rulers are the natural enemies of the tories and consequently the natural allies of the liberals; but Beaconsfield may attempt to delay the inevitable by using them nevertheless. On this account it is not known when he will take himself and his associates out of office. In 1874 Mr. Gladstone resigned the premiership as soon as the adverse electoral result was known; but it is very probable that the chief of the jingoes will hold on to office until parliament has met and a vote of censure has been recorded. Then, too it is not known who will be summoned by the queen to form a new cabinet. It should be Mr. Gladstone, who is the real leader of the liberals, but it is more probable that she will ask Earl Granville to undertake the task, or else Lord Hartington. Lord Granville is the liberal leader in the house of lords and the marquis of Hartington in the house of commons. Mr. Gladstone is, however, the only head of the party that the electors recognize. It matters little to him personally whether he is in office or not. Like John Bright, he holds a place in the hearts of Englishmen that the queen cannot either increase by any honor she can confer, or belittle by any act within her great authority.

The Southern Delegations to Cincinnati.

From remarks in one or two of our southern exchanges, we infer that a question has arisen as to whether the southern states shall be represented in the democratic convention at Cincinnati by instructed or uninstructed delegates. The duty of the south in this matter is so plain—its policy so obvious—that this question is the very last that would seem to invite discussion. The position the south occupies, and her relations to national affairs, are, in the very nature of things, peculiar—so peculiar, indeed, that generations will come and go before she will be able to resume her old status. This fact has not been clearly appreciated by our people heretofore, and that it is not appreciated now is apparent in the suggestion that certain southern states send delegations to Cincinnati instructed for certain democratic aspirants.

The attitude of the south in the convention should be altogether passive. The harmony that should exist between her delegates should find its proper culmination in the indorsement of any candidate whose availability shall commend him to the support of those delegates who know the scope and extent of that spirit of sectionalism which will be invoked at the north and west, and who appreciate the strenuous appeals that will be made to prejudices which are still rampant, and which are still effective in their bitterness. This passive policy will give the south the power to dictate who shall not be the candidate of the party; but even this power is to be exercised solely with reference to his ability to unite all democratic elements in the southern states. Further than this the delegates from the south cannot go without putting in jeopardy the success of the party. In a certain sense, this may be a humiliating fact, but it is a fact nevertheless, and if ever a section or a party had reason to recognize facts and profit by them that section is the south and that party is the democracy.

The plain duty of the southern states is to select their best men to represent them in the convention and to leave them without instructions. They should be men who appreciate the peculiar position of the south in relation to national affairs, and who will have an instinctive knowledge of those qualifications in a candidate which will enable him, to some extent at least, to destroy the force and effect of the sectional appeals that will be made to the people of the north. The convention will then be a real deliberative body, and this is what it should be in view of the momentous character of the campaign which it will inaugurate. We can conceive of no other successful policy to be pursued by the south. The selection of a candidate should be left entirely to those who will have to confront the sectionalism of the north, and who ought to be able to choose a man strong enough to meet the prejudices of the north on their own ground and beat them. Every suggestion of wise policy is in the direction of uninstructed delegates from the south.

The Russo-Chinese Trouble.

The province of Kuldja, the richest in Central Asia, possessing great strategic value as commanding the road to Siberia, and containing about 141,000 people, will probably be made the subject of a rupture between Russia and China. The latter power first acquired the province in 1755, when it was at once almost depopulated by the most horrible cruelty and bloodshed. In one city 75,000 people were put to death in one day. It was repeopled by convicts, discharged soldiers, and a mixed importation from Turkestan. In 1860 this mixed population revolted, and Russia gathered in the province together with other khanates in its progress eastward. The Chinese government never, however, liked the annexation of Kuldja, and not long ago it sent Chung How to St. Petersburg to secure by negotiation, if possible, the purchase of the province. Chung How succeeded in making a treaty with Russia, by the terms of which Kuldja would be handed over to China for five million taels, or about $7,500,000. Right here a change was instituted in the policy of China. She refused to ratify the treaty for the acquisition of Kuldja, alleging that the indemnity was too large, and that her ambassador had been governed by corrupt motives. But these are not believed to be the true reasons of her refusal. It is thought, in the first place, that English diplomacy is playing a secret hand in the game. It is believed, too, that populous China desires an opportunity to show the world that she is not a baby nation—that her people are not merely growers of tea, makers of toys and consumers of opium. She has acquired a fine fleet of gunboats and two formidable iron-clads. The old junks have been discarded as war vessels. She has, too, bought improved arms, and put her forces on an European footing. Her military strength may be a half million of men, or it may be ten times that number—no one knowing much about her actual strength. She can, however, get as many men as she may desire, and her strength as an aggressive power turns therefore more upon her pecuniary resources, the ability of her leaders, and the courage of her soldiers. These have not been tested, and China actually seems to court a chance to display her strength. She is willing to fight Portugal for Macoa, or Russia for Kuldja. The fight over Kuldja will be a long one—the coveted province being nearly as far from Pekin as it is from Moscow; it is almost inaccessible to either power; but Russia seeks Japan as an ally, hoping doubtless, by assailing China both in the west and on the sea, to bring the struggle to a speedy and favorable conclusion. What England will do in the case of war will depend upon circumstances, and the result of her general elections. The war will be no small affair in any event, and if China does not withdraw her claims to Kuldja, it is inevitable. Russia is a grasping power, but civilization and humanity will be the gainers if in a struggle between the Muscovites and Mongolians, the latter are driven to the wall. The world at large has nothing to hope for from Chinese victories; and yet Beaconsfield would not hesitate to make England an ally of China if he could thereby prevent the aggrandizement of Russia. His power is happily however nearly ended, and England will not henceforth be afflicted with Russophobia. This may mean much or little in the coming struggle between Russia and China. The situation will be watched with great interest.

The Southern Cultivator For April.

The thoroughly practical character of the Southern Cultivator extends even to its typographical appearance. From first to last there is nothing "fancy" or meretricious in its appearance. It is a plain publication for plain people, and there is a certain homeliness in the title-page that is not at all unattractive. We doubt if any publication ever filled its field or performed a special mission more thoroughly than this. It is intended for matter-of-fact people, and its unpretending appearance is suggestive. The number for April has just been issued from THE CONSTITUTION establishment, and it is sufficient praise to say of it that it is fully up to the practical standard which its editor has fixed for the publication. The thoughts for the month are suggested by experience and by a thorough knowledge of the requirements of southern agriculture. There are articles on the improvement of cotton seed, on the co-operation of cotton-growers and cotton-spinners, on salt as a fertilizer, on the late planting of cotton, and on worn soils and the proper method of starting clover.

The stock department, the dairy, the poultry yard and the horticultural department are rich in articles of permanent and practical value, and the inquiry department touches upon a variety of subjects of abounding interest to farmers and agriculturists. Indeed, it may be said that every article is of timely interest.

IT is not to be supposed that the subsidized department of the ways and means committee has seen the error of its ways. It hopes to prevent the passage of the proposed reform bills in the house by loading them down with amendments. The monopolists and their tools are very shrewd.

LOTTA gives the stage slide in eleven languages.

THE same qualities which led Blaine to defy Mulligan after securing the celebrated letters also led him to debate a legal point with Senator Thurman. What with his fits and a pair of copper mines in each jaw, Blaine cuts quite an attractive figure in our politics.

SINCE Mr. Tilden has become a member of the New York Horticultural society, he will have an opportunity of stabbing John Kelly behind the ear with a peeled carrot.

IF the portrait of John Sherman in his biography is an authorized version, it is evidence that there has been a considerable waste of the raw material somewhere. There is a lascivious glare in John's eye that ought to commend him to the republican populace.

THE Courier-Journal is furnishing shotguns as premiums to subscribers. Our esteemed contemporary is evidently anxious to increase its circulation in Texas.

WE do not print spring poetry unless the name of the author is attached—and not then unless the fourth, eleventh and twenty-fifth stanzas possess political significance. The necessity of harmony in the poetry and in the party must not be lost sight of.

MR. TILDEN is beginning his campaign against John Kelly just seven months too late. It should have occurred last fall.

OWING to the superb support of her stepfather, begid, Mary Anderson has cleared $45,000 this season. She still remains nineteen years old. Success doesn't interfere with an actresses' age.

THE Springfield Republican is printing a very strong serial story in its Sunday edition, entitled "A Man of Business." It lacks the literary flavor of Boston, but it is original and serious.

THE disclosures in regard to Chapman, one of the executive clerks at the white house, turned Mr. Rogers's hair gray in a single night. For the benefit of the future historian, it is but fair to say that Mr. Rogers was never more amiable than at this moment. He is shocked, but not embittered.

SOME of the brightest and ablest members of the republican party of Pennsylvania are now fugitives from justice. If justice wasn't so blind, the entire organization would disappear around the corner and leave the worthy sheriff nonplussed.

THE democrats will have to mollify Mr. Tilden as well as John Kelly. It seems to be the destiny of this great organization to be forever keeping down a street fight between its own proud leaders.

THE government pays Vanderbilt a salary of $310,000 every three months—or $1,240,000 a year—not to own taxable property.

FERNANDO WOOD insists that he is a tariff reformer. The trouble with Fernando is that he has had his system patented, and the monopolists have secured the right to use it in this country

BEACONSFIELD will have an opportunity to attend the spring picnics.

GEORGIA POLITICS.

MACON will want to take a hand in politics this year.

ARE the Grant democrats doing their whole duty at this juncture?

THE Thomas county republicans are for Grant.

SINCE the Tom Blodgett explosion, the Sherman element in Georgia has been carving out an underground passage.

THE attempt to make Simmons an issue in Georgia politics will create considerable amusement among the boys.

BETWEEN politics and agriculture the average Georgia farmer will have a bitterly busy time the rest of the year.

IF there is any Ohio man in Georgia he should present his credentials before the nominations are made.

PLEDGER and Wright, the editors of the two colored newspapers, are for Grant, but they will have to surrender to the white leaders.

THE revenue deputies are very busy political managers. John Sherman ought to increase their salaries.

INDEPENDENTISM will make little headway in Georgia this year if the democratic campaign is conducted in the proper spirit.

THE Oglethorpe Echo says the colored element in that county is taking no interest in politics.

JEFF LONG says that negroes are traveling while the white folks are in bed. But somebody ought to tell Jeff that the revenue officers have learned the trick.

SINCE the revenue officials in Georgia have wet their stalwart thumbs there seems to be little chance for the colored republicans to conduct their campaign on a platform and with candidates of their own.

THE Dalton Headlight says the greenback party will have an electoral ticket in the field in this state. Probably. But the greenback voters will recognize the necessity of harmonizing with the democratic party.

THE Dalton Headlight states that the county greenback conference in that place a few days ago was too small to admit of the transaction of any general business. There may or may not be significance in the statement.

THE probability is that there will be contesting delegations to the republican convention from Chatham county. The colored voters of Savannah may as well make up their minds that the custom house clique doesn't propose to be left out in the cold.

THE Madison Madisonian says: "All we wish of any portion of the democratic party is to let the people, uninfluenced by passionate appeals or prejudicial allusions to any particular candidate, select the men whom we are to vote for, satisfied that if thus let alone, good men will in every instance be selected."

IT doesn't make any difference to the republican office-holders whether there is any republican organization in Georgia or not. They merely want the impression to go forth that they control the election of delegates to the national convention. The ability to do this will enable them to hold their offices, provided a republican president is elected.

THE Albany Advertiser remarks: "The members of the committee were evidently convinced of the fact that the custom which has prevailed in this state in the matter of appointing delegates and manipulating conventions, during the past eight or ten years, had to undergo a change in order to longer preserve harmony, and they have acted accordingly. Their suggestions contemplate just what the Advertiser has been advocating ever since the campaign, which has now been virtually opened, has been under discussion—a fair and open expression of the people in the primaries and conventions."

THE Augusta Chronicle says: "The executive committee have exhausted all known methods of procuring harmony among brethren, and the most pronounced and hide-bound freelance cannot deny it. The man who repudiates and declines this tender of good will and peace does so, in defiance of justice and common sense, and does so because he has some selfish motive at war with the general good, and in sympathy with the common enemy. We trust, however, that such persons will be few and far between, and they must see that their action is not such as to commend them to popular approval."

THE Atlanta correspondent of the New York Herald makes this summary: The Georgia legislature has adjourned, and its members could only be reached by mail, and many failed to answer, only 143 out of 215 democrats responding. Here is the state where Tilden still appears strong, the canvass resulting as follows:

	First Choice.
Tilden	79
Thurman	14
Seymour	19
Bayard	11
Hendricks	4
Nominee	16
Scattering	5

The Washington correspondent of the Savannah News has this: "Senator Gordon has returned to the city. He did not go to Georgia as expected, which must be a sore disappointment to a number of rural editors who have been pitching into him for going home to attend to local politics. If he had wanted to attend to local politics he would have done so, however, despite the aforesaid rural editors. I met the senator this evening, and asked him who he thought would be the next nominee for governor of Georgia. He replied unhesitatingly that Governor Colquitt would be renominated. He said that the people were rapidly filing into the Colquitt ranks, and in his mind there was no doubt of his renomination. He thought that those who have opposed him are rapidly changing front in his favor."

This lady had some of the pearls less beautiful than the others removed, and added two other rows; one, which came from the jewels sold by the queen of Naples, the other, from the necklace of the virgin of Atocha, sold by a great Spanish personage. At present the suite of pearls belonging to the countess, earrings and brooch included, is worth 800,000 or 900,000 francs. It is said to be the finest set of pearls in the world.

—Apropos of the pending election in England, the Pall Mall Gazette prints a statement of election expenses, a few figures from which will be of interest. The cost of obtaining a seat depends almost entirely upon whether the election is contested or not. At the last general election, of the 652 members returned, only 187, or considerably less than one-third, were elected without opposition. The aggregate expenses returned to the house of commons incurred by all the candidates amounted to over $5,000,000. There was expended by the successful candidates $3,195 000, and $2,040,000 by the unsuccessful. Of the 652 successful candidates, 349 were conservatives, 250 liberals and 53 home-rulers. The conservatives spent $1,902,250, or an average of $5,450; the liberals, $1,225,000, average, $4,900; the home-rulers, $67,750, average, $1,275. The 429 unsuccessful candidates comprised 161 conservatives, 254 liberals and 14 home-rulers, and they threw away the following amounts: Conservatives, $858,000; liberals, $1,168,500; home-rulers, $13,500. The largest sum spent on any city election was in London, in which an aggregate expenditure of six candidates amounted to $77,850.

—The smallest Protestant commune probably in Europe, and certainly the most primitive, is that of Ablandchenen, canton Berne. Ablandchenen, a word literally signifying "a little outlying place," is situated in a remote mountain valley, 4,000 feet above the level of the sea, and its unsophisticated inhabitants contrive to dispense with most of the appendages which are considered inseparable from modern civilization. They do not possess a single public house. There is no doctor in the place, but there has not been a death for many years. Commerce and handicrafts are conspicuous by their absence; there is neither blacksmith, baker, wheelwright, nor shopkeeper in all the commune; and the people, being all honest and peaceable, require neither notary, lawyer, nor policeman. Every fourteen days a peddler with a van goes the round of the commune and supplies the housewives with all that they want in the shape of crockery, drapery, thread, needles, paper, and sundries. Food is provided by their own flocks, herds and poultry. They have a tiny church with a single bell, and it is a standing joke in the place that when a girl is born they ring a peal, but on the birth of a lad they ring only one bell. A correspondent writing there to a Zurich paper says that they enjoy a far larger measure of happiness than falls to the lot of most men, and have no desire to exchange their Alpine home for the life of cities.

Tilden Against the Field.

Washington Letter in Winchester Ky., Democrat.

Politics are booming in Washington. Every democrat that you meet has a plan of his own by which to beat Grant, who will undoubtedly be the nominee in the convention at Chicago. A fresh subject from the country, like myself, is pounced upon from every side, and compelled to listen to theories and arguments which vary with the speaker. It is Tilden against the field, and a majority of the democratic members of congress are against him. The truth is that they gave him away in 1877, and nothing so embitters a man against another as to have been instrumental in doing him an injury. The great argument is that he can not be elected. "He can not carry New York," says one. "He will lose Virginia," cries another. "Texas, Louisiana, Florida, South Carolina and North Carolina will vote for Grant if Tilden is nominated," shouts a third. And at last some fellow brings up the rear and suggests that he can not even carry Kentucky. Then your humble servant feels easier because he sees it is all a big bluff, just as it was in 1876. Mr. Tilden is a candidate, and nothing can prevent his nomination and election but the cowardice and treachery of the democrats themselves.

What Protection Does.

Washington Post.

It is no part of the duty of a good government to regulate the prices of food clothing and other goods. Yet this is precisely what protection does. And it is always done in a way to bear as heavily as possible on the poor; to take from the laborer a large part of each day's earnings and put the money, thus filched, into the pocket of his rich neighbor It is an ingenious device for carrying on a gigantic system of robbery. The American people will not much longer tolerate such oppression. The masses have gotten a habit of reading and thinking. They cannot be driven, like cattle, through all time to vote away their own head for the benefit of capitalists. It is altogether likely that the campaign of 1884 will find this the absorbing and paramount issue. If the contest shall come at that time, or later, it will find more than nine-tenths of the democratic voters on the side of free trade, and ranged with them will be the best brain and brawn of the republican party. The struggle will be hard and bitter, for capital will be arrayed against manhood, but the right will triumph.

No Enthusiasm for Tilden.

Chicago Times.

The only southern state which seems to be loyal to Tilden is Georgia, and there isn't any enthusiasm in her support of the sage. The leading democratic politicians of the state are for him, first, because they deem his nomination inevitable, and next, because they are inclined to think that he was euchered out of the place in '77. One of the leaders says: "The fraud issue will made it obligatory to nominate Tilden, while my personal preference would be Thurman." The democrat whose cordial wish is for Tilden's nomination is hard to find.

Grant in Georgia.

Fitchburg, Mass., Sentinel.

General Grant is popular in the south. The states of Texas, Georgia and Virginia are controlled by white men, and the democratic party in all those states is divided. It will not be surprising if, by the help of the large republican minorities there, Grant will carry some of them. Florida and the Carolinas are naturally republican, and Grant, if anybody of his politics, can carry them. The blacks believe in him, and will rally to his support with enthusiasm.

The Last Chance for the South.

Louisville Courier-Journal.

The national contest immediately before us is the last in which the south will play the leading part as a political entity. The next census will alter, almost revolutionize, the relative positions of the sections. It will bring the west to the front and, comparatively speaking, send both the east and the south to the rear.

Grant not Wealthy.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To the charge that Grant is a wealthy man the answer is made that according to his own statement he would be almost without pecuniary means now if he hadn't made $60,000 in a lucky mining speculation. Why doesn't he go to work then? There's lots of unoccupied territory in the country waiting to be tickled with a hoe.

What, Conger!

Boston Journal, rep.

THE GEORGIA CONSTITUTION says there is no man so dead in politics as Sam Randall, meaning the democratic speaker of the house, and predicts that his successor will either be Mr. Carlisle, of Kentucky or Blount, of Georgia. If there is a fair election this fall, some such man as Conger, of Michigan, will preside over the next house.

Enriching Literature.

Chicago Times.

Since Conkling used, in his Utica speech, the line, "the shallows murmur, but the deeps are dumb," there has been much curiosity to ascertain the author from whom the quotation was made. It has been determined at last that Goethe is the man.

Influence by the Yard.

Washington Post.

Petitions to congress are influential in proportion to their length. It is not a matter of illustrious names, for nobody reads more than one or two at the top. It is simply a question to be determined by a tape-line.

Losing His Grip.

Manchester Union.

Now that the balance of trade has turned against this country, John Sherman does not feel as much confidence in himself as he did a few months ago. He is evidently losing his "grip."

An Entirely Original Plan.

New York Tribune.

The third termers propose that the republican party shall reject the first choice of a vast majority of its own members for president, and accept the first choice of the entire democratic party.

His Managers are too Slow.

Philadelphia Times.

The importance of moving Grant up into Iowa in time for the republican state convention seems to have been overlooked. The neglect to arrange a coincidence of that sort has given the state to Blaine.

For the Public Good.

The Hancock boom is ready to be stuffed and put away as a relic.

The Troubles of a Choir.

It was the fair soprano of
An orthodox church choir,
Who sat up in the gallery
And hit the zacred lyre.

Quite young she was, and pretty, too—
A plump and pleasing person—
The tenor was a brawny Scot—
His name: J. H. McPherson.

He loved the fair soprano, and
Would fain have married been;
But Birdie Blanche (that was her name)
Told him that was too thin.

The blonde contralto of the choir
Was also young and fresh,
And went from E to lower M
Like one of the profresh.

Of course between her and Miss Blanche
Arose a deadly feud.
In no church choir are women known
To live in sisterhood.

One eve, when twilight gently spread
Its mantle over all,
The members of this model choir
Had met for a rehearsal.

The church was somewhat dimly lit;
The tenor and Miss Blanche
Were first to get to what she called
"This old deserted ranche."

They sat them down a corner in
To wait until the rest
Should come along, and all the while
Their lucky absence blessed.

The blonde contralto, coming in,
With holy useless haste,
Discovered the young tenor's arm
Around somebody's waist.

She laid the case before the Board
Of Elders, who to show
Their reprobation of the hug,
Declared that Blanche must go.

She went, but not until she had,
Before a select few,
Remarked that other hearts would ache
If she told what she knew.

It was her last and deadliest shot,
And proved a funeral pyre
Upon which to incinerate
The balance of the choir.

Stern parents all, with one accord,
Made haste their girls to snake
From out the place where Scandal's tongue
Had 'gan itself to shake.

Without some girls, a choir, I ween,
Is like unto the play
Of "Hamlet," with the Scandina-
Vian out of the way.

Hell hath no fury, some one says,
To match a woman's ire;
But ere the poet made this bluff,
He should have joined a choir.

Grateful Women.

None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women. It is the only remedy peculiarly adapted to the many ills the sex is almost universally subject to. Chills and fever, indigestion or deranged liver, constant or periodical sick headaches, weakness in the back or kidneys, pain in the shoulders and different parts of the body, a feeling of lassitude and despondency, are all readily removed by these Bitters.—Courant.

A $1,000 Guarantee.

Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure will positively cure Bright's Disease and Diabetes; and it is guaranteed that it will also cure 99 per cent of other kidney diseases, 95 per cent. of all liver diseases, and will help in every case without injury to the system, when taken according to directions, and the sum of $1,000 will be paid to any person who can prove that it has failed to do this.—H. The French Broad Road—Rome and Chattanooga.

Wilmington Review.

We hear that a rumor is in circulation on the streets in Columbia, S. C., that the Wilmington and Weldon railroad and Wilmington, Columbia and Augusta railroad companies are about to purchase the Greenville and Columbia railroad, which commencing at Columbia runs through one of the finest cotton producing countries, for a distance of of 143 miles, that there is in South Carolina. Greenville, which is the terminal point at the other end of the road, is 143 miles distant from Columbia and immediately on the Air-Line railway between Charlotte and Atlanta. This line will give Wilmington easy communication with Atlanta, and place us in intercourse with a fine productive country, which we doubt not, under the able management of Mr. A. Pope, the general freight agent of the two roads above mentioned, will develop a nice business for our little city by the sea.

In the event of the consummation of this trade, as suggested by the rumor referred to above, we may expect to see our foreign cotton trade, by direct shipment, greatly increased. Wilmington is certainly capable of handling a large amount of cotton for foreign shipment. We have three of the finest cotton presses anywhere at work on the south Atlantic coast, and besides these we have other facilities for a large shipping trade. Our bar and river improvements have given us an additional advantage over what we enjoyed in former years. With nearly or quite eighteen feet of water on the bar, we can compete quite successfully with our neighbors on the south as well to the north of us. After all we don't know if we can succeed in making this connection, but that we can well afford to stop weeping over the Best iniquity, albeit that does not lessen the monstrosity of the act of sacrificing a million and a half of dollars of the people's property to a shrewd syndicate of yankee speculators.

THE FRENCH BROAD ROAD.

Augusta Evening News.

On Monday next, 5th instant, at 7 a. m., the ground will be broken at Easley station on the Air-Line railroad, 12 miles west of Greenville, South Carolina, for the Atlantic and French Broad railroad, from Belton to Asheville. The road from Belton has the advantage of connection with Columbia via the Greenville and Columbia and the Savannah Valley and Greenwood and Augusta railroads with Augusta, and is almost an air-line from Augusta to Asheville, making western connections there through by Warm springs to Wolf creek and on to Knoxville, using the Greenville and Columbia railroad to Greenwood and the Greenwood and Augusta railroad to Augusta. It only requires ninety-eight miles of road to be built to complete the link between Augusta and the west. Mr. Wm. J. Kirk, superintendent and chief engineer of the Atlantic and French Broad railroad, has secured fifty convicts to start with from the South Carolina penitentiary, whom he takes along to-day, and expects to obtain one hundred more before the first of next January. The North Carolina division will put on two hundred convicts before the first of next January. The company expect to grade the road through in three years. Its entire length will traverse the French Broad valley, the far famed section of country known as the paradise of the south and the "Land of the Sky." The company has funds enough in hand to run one hundred convicts for three years to come.

ROME AND CHATTANOOGA.

Chattanooga Times.

A meeting of the directors of the Lookout Mountain railroad was held yesterday. The entire day was devoted to consolidating all charters for railroads from Chattanooga to Rome, to harmonizing all interests and absorbing all projects into the one organization, the Lookout Mountain railroad company. Success crowned their efforts in an admirable degree and will greatly strengthen and advance the interests of the enterprise.

Mr. C. G. Samuels, of Rome, Ga., a few days ago obtained possession of the two charters recently held by Mr. Blanchard, viz: The charter for what is known as the Memphis branch, a projected railroad between Rome and Memphis, and also the charter of the Rome and Summerville railroad. Of the Memphis branch twelve miles are already graded, connecting Rome and Catheris's Gap. This work is mainly in good condition, and the whole can be repaired, ready for rails, at a small expense. Of the Rome and Summerville road, four miles are partly graded and in good condition.

Since the organization of the Lookout Mountain railroad company, these counter projects have divided all interests, and caused a rivalry to exist between the friends of the different charters, almost nullifying their efforts. During the last few weeks, after an existence of only two months, the Lookout Mountain railroad company began to show its superior organization, life and activity over the other companies, gained numerous advantages and accomplished more in one month than they have done in years. The rival companies, in consequence, became disorganized, many of their supporters attached themselves to the company which bids fair to succeed, and the charter members were almost deserted, incapable of action. The negotiations for a consolidation of these charters into the Lookout Mountain charter followed as a natural consequence. The preliminaries have been pending for several days, and yesterday at the meeting of the directors, the consolidation was effected.

A ROMANTIC RAILROADER.

Cincinnati Enquirer.

In the employ of the Cincinnati Southern railroad is a young man whose history bears a decided touch of romance. Only a few years since he was possessed of abundant wealth, but along with it, unfortunately, an inclination to spend it. Educated, accomplished and generous, he was a favorite in elegant circles in the larger cities of both America and Europe. The years of pleasure-seeking saw his fortune steadily shrinking. He paused when it was too late, and even the remnant left to him after he had reversed his steps was exhausted in fruitless efforts to engage in some pursuit, perhaps, which would not impose labor, to which he had been a stranger. His means finally exhausted, he might have fallen back upon his father, who is a gentleman of wealth, and one of the most honored in the state of Georgia. But, trampling false pride under foot, he sought work, rather than position, determined not to be a pensioner upon a parent's bounty. His acquaintances were doubtless surprised that the erstwhile gentleman of leisure and pleasure was baggage-master on a railroad, but the surprise gave way to admiration at the plucky way in which he held down to his work. In time he was promoted to office-work on the same road, but having faith in the future of our railroad he applied for a position on it. His application was backed by strong recommendations from some of the most prominent railroad officials and leading citizens of Atlanta, who had known him from childhood. He has been for three months faithfully discharging the duties assigned him in the office of the Cincinnati Southern. The young man has certainly done nothing less than he should have done in going to work, but not every one circumstanced as he was would have gone at it in the manner he did. His conduct shows that there are elements of manhood in his character, and it is hoped success may attend the young gentleman and all like him.

"Art Reception."

Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, Mr. Moser will give his first Art Reception here, at his new studio in Central block, opposite his old studio at Goodman's. Mr. Moser is already busy arranging his paintings, sketches and "Bric a Brac." The collection is so varied and rich that one cannot fail to be entertained. From the many excellent notices we clip the following from the Toledo Sunday Journal: "The first Art Reception of Mr. J. H. Moser, beginning May 1st and continuing through the week, were largely attended and much interest evinced in the artist's work."

"Mr. Mosera young artist of Galveston, Texas, has on exhibition at Williams & Everett's in a collection of water-colors, a picture that would do credit to an artist trained in the best English school."—The Boston Transcript, as quoted by the "Art Interchange," official journal of the Woman's society of decorative art, New York.

Mr. Moser will give instructions Tuesday and Friday forenoons devoted to pupils, "Atlanta sketch club" every Tuesday and Friday night. Sketching from the living model a feature. Gentlemen interested should apply to Mr. Moser for membership.

THE COTTON MARKET.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE, Atlanta, April 3, 1880.

New York—Futures during the past week have been active, and at times considerable excitement was manifested in the market. After the opening on Monday a steady decline prevailed which resulted in a material loss by Thursday, though on that day the market rallied and moved upwards, the advance continuing until the close to-day. Compared with Monday's opening figures the months have lost 20 to 30 points, but as the general undertone is firm it is quite probable that the coming week will experience a higher range of prices. Spots are firm and steady at 13c, these figures being ⅛c below Monday's prices. The net receipts for week ending last night amount to 46,989 bales, against 51,978 bales last week and against 53,895 bales for the corresponding week last year; exports for the week 81,213 bales; stock 770,131 bales; net receipts to-day 6,525 bales; exports 7,894 bales; stock 765,074 bales; sales to-day for future delivery 99,000 bales.

Liverpool—Futures closed firm. Spots—Uplands 7 5 16d; Orleans 7⅜d; sales 10,000 bales, of which 8,500 were American.

The local cotton future market has been decidedly active during the entire week, and sales at the exchange have reached considerable figures. Yesterday and to-day have been particularly active, and the exchange was well attended. The spot market to-day closed firm with a good inquiry for good grades. Stains are neglected, as will be seen by our prices. The market is a fraction lower than a week ago, which is evidently the consequence of the late decline in New York. Our receipts for the week ending last night foot up to 266 bales, against 515 bales last week and against 1,012 bales for the corresponding week last year. We quote the market as follows: Good middlings 12⅝c; middlings 12⅛@12¼c; low middlings 11¾c; good ordinary 10⅛@11c.

MARCUS A. BELL, Secretary.

JOHN KEELY'S

New premises will be formally opened on Monday, April 5th inst., on which occasion he proposes to show to the Atlanta public such a store and such a stock of goods as must do both himself and the city of Atlanta credit. Whilst in discharging our duty as journalists, we are often called upon to say pleasant things of prominent business houses, we have never derived more pleasure from such a performance than in the present instance, for we well know the man of whom we write. We know his sterling integrity as a man and as a merchant. We know the modesty of his start in business, and we are aware of his unprecedented success (for John Keely's business has ceased years ago to be an experiment) and we rejoice with him in that magnificent success. His immense store is fairly bewildering in its proportions. His recent addition of nearly two large stores to his previously immense warerooms makes his mammoth establishment at once one of the largest and most beautiful stores in the south. True, he does not feel particularly proud of the exterior appearance of his buildings, but he has made the interior everything which money, spent with a lavish hand and extraordinary capacity, could suggest or accomplish. Immense as is his store, 86 feet front by 160 feet back, and running from No. 58 to No. 64 Whitehall street, somehow you don't have to go far to get to any special department. The immense width gives him such an admirable arrangement of departments that the intense disgust of the weary "searcher of dry goods" at being dragged through immensely lengthy space is avoided. His millinery and ladies' suits, two new departments by the way, are attracting much attention, whilst his stock of silks and dress goods has never been excelled in the south. Very few merchants of our acquaintance suggest the probability of so brilliant a future in a mercantile way as our friend Captain Keely. Indeed, if his business continues to grow as it is now doing, we would scarcely be astonished to find that he occupied the entire block. "So mote it be," say we.

Complimentary Concerts.

The Atlanta musical institute, under the management of Madame Emmy von der Hoya Schultze, with E. August Schultze, as musical director, will give three complimentary concerts at DeGive's opera house, Tuesday, April 6th, at 8 o'clock, p. m., Matinee Wednesday, April 7th, at 3 o'clock p. m., Thursday April 8th, at 8 o'clock p. m. Complimentary tickets can be procured on application at the institute.

We have seen the programmes for the above concerts, and each one bristles with gems. About thirty of the pupils will participate. The high character and standing of the Atlanta musical institute is too firmly established to require newspaper endorsements. As musicians and as highly qualified to instruct in music, Professor Schultze and his accomplished lady rank deservedly high; in fact there are no superior instructors. We advise all who possibly can to procure tickets and enjoy a rich musical feast by attending the concerts.

The Bank Statement.

NEW YORK, April 3.—The weekly statement of the associated banks shows the following changes: Loans decrease, $227,200; specie decrease, $1,104,500; legal tender decrease, $425,000; deposits decrease, $1,033,700; circulation decrease, $136,000; reserve decrease, $1,271,075. The banks now hold $309,900 less than legal requirements.

David H. Dougherty.

A little over two years ago I sold my interest in the old firm of Silvey & Dougherty, and just two years ago on the 1st of April I opened on my own account, with but one determination, and that was to build a business upon the one price system or quit the field. In a business point of view, I hold that all are upon a level and that one person's money should buy as much as another's. I had faith in this course and hoped to build up a successful business in a reasonable time, but had not the slightest idea that my business could possibly reach such a magnitude as it has in so short a time. However, there are other features that I am sure have aided me materially in building up my present immense business. First, my identity with the people, added to a close observation and study of all the wants and requirements of the entire country; second, having so long been the buyer for the old wholesale house of Silvey & Dougherty familiarized me with first hands on all goods. Then my determination is to deal in no goods but the most reliable fabrics. No matter how common the article is, it must be of sound, honest material. Give me a "nimble penny," for I hold that there is more gain from "large sales and small profits" than can possibly be realized from "small sales and large profits." This is not the day and time that we can claim your patronage upon the ground that we knew your aunts and uncles and your grandfathers. It won't do. It isn't worth a cent. Old fogyism has played. We must fall in—move up in the front ranks with our colors flying and convince the people that it is to their interest to deal with us if we expect our vessels to sail.

In conclusion, all I ask is an examination of my goods and prices, and will then leave you to judge as to your interest.

Yours truly,
DAVID H. DOUGHERTY.

John Ryan

Has completed at last that which has long been needed in Atlanta, viz: A ladies' ready-made suit department. The compliments showered upon the display of fine suits, and the large sales of yesterday are convincing facts that merit will always have its reward. In adding this new department to his already mammoth establishment, we were told by Mr. Ryan that he spared no pains or trouble to procure the latest imported costumes, and we believe every word that he uttered, for in looking through we were astonished to see the number of suits, and the magnificence of the styles. Beautiful black gros-grain combination costumes, trimmed with plain and brocaded silks at $50.00. Magnificent colored silk and wool suits, silk trimmed with fringe, at $22.00. Ninety trimmed suits at $10.00, $12 50 and $15.00. Black silk suits at $35 00. Cashmere suits, trimmed with silk or satin brocade, at $10.00, $12 00, $14.00 and $20.00. Pretty spring suits at $6.00, $8.00, $10.00 and $12 00. In fact, our eyes were completely dazzled with the beauty and magnificence of this display. We advise all that wish to see the new styles in spring suits to inspect the display made by Mr. Ryan, whether they want to purchase or not, as it will give them an idea of what is going to be worn this season. Your attention is called to Mr. Ryan's advertisement in another column.

To-day Wenona temple Cold Water Templars will give another method of Sunday teaching to the children in which the children are both teacher and pupil. Public cordially invited.

The McDaniel Street Fire.

The fire which occurred yesterday morning at an early hour, was occasioned by the burning of the residence and store of Mr. R. C. Gregg, on McDaniel street. The total loss is put down at $1,200. The property was covered by insurance with the Royal insurance company of which Walter, Boyd & Whitner, are the agents, to the extent of $700. Everything was consumed. The cause of the fire is not definitely known.

Congress Water None genuine sold on draught. Its superiority as a cathartic and alterative consists in its entire freedom from everything bitter, acid or crude that produces headache, internal soreness, and tends to destroy the mucuous membrane. All mineral waters that are dangerous irritants may be known by an acid after-taste.

Seldom do the citizens of any city have the opportunity of selecting from such an elegant assortment of goods as is now on exhibition at the beautiful salesroom of Austell & Mangum in this city. This firm never places before the public "bankrupt" or "watered" stocks, but always go direct to first hands and make selections of all the newest and choicest novelties of the season, and by paying cash down on the spot they are thereby enabled to sell many styles of first-class goods for the same price as many other houses ask for their shop-worn goods. The great success which this house has achieved within the space of one year is perhaps beyond precedent, yet we think that those of our readers who have patronized this firm will agree with us in that such a system of transacting business as characterizes this firm is deserving of the richest rewards. They sell nothing but the most reliable goods and have only one price, and that price the lowest in the city. We cheerfully commend this firm to the public. See their advertisement in another column of our paper.
